

Plugging in the International Northeast

A Canada-US Dialogue on solving this region's electricity challenges

Stewart MacPherson Acting President of NB Power makes a point during the AIMS ECANS conference
“Plugging in the International Northeast”

AIMS President Brian Lee Crowley speaks with former Chair of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) Curt Hébert, keynote speaker at the “Plugging in the International Northeast”

Jim Connors (left), Vice President, Regulatory Affairs, Emera and Robert Burke (right), Principal Analyst in Markets Development, New England ISO lead the discussion on “What’s working and what’s not in regional co-operation.”

George Spencer, Editor of “Restructuring Today” speaks about the discipline of the marketplace. Listening, to his right, is New Brunswick Power’s Acting President Stewart MacPherson.

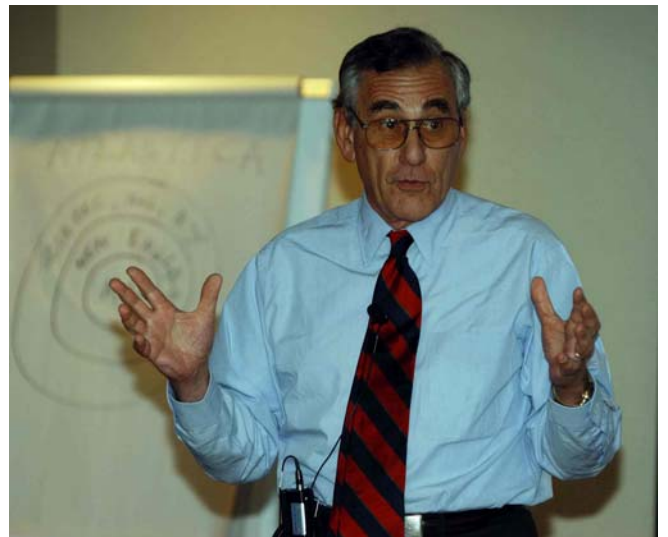

Keynote speaker Curt Hébert Jr, Executive VP, External Affairs, Entergy Corporation addresses the conference luncheon with his talk entitled “A Model for the Electricity Market of the Future”

ECANS’ John Woods exchanges ideas with “Restructuring Today” Editor, George Spencer during a break in the conference

Ken Malloy, CEO, Center for the Advancement of Energy Markets prepares for his talk “Recovering from Setbacks in Electric Competition Policy”

Consultant Gordon Weil, author of the AIMS’ paper, “The Atlantica Power Market: A plan for joint action” wraps up the conference.

